DISCUSSION

Section 41 allows taxpayers a credit against tax for increasing research activities. Generally, the credit is an incremental credit equal to the sum of 20 percent of the excess (if any) of the taxpayer's qualified research expenses for the taxable year over the base amount, and 20 percent of the taxpayer's basic research payments determined under Section

41(e)(1)(A) 1 . However, the term "qualified research" shall not include any research to the extent such research is funded by any grant, contract, or otherwise by another person. I.R.C. § 41(d)(4)(H). 2

A taxpayer's research is funded when the taxpayer agrees to perform research for another person without retaining substantial rights to the research under the agreement providing for the research. Treas. Reg. §§ 1.41(5)(d)(2) and $(3)^3$. Pursuant to Treasury Regulation 1.41-5(d)(3), a taxpayer does not retain substantial rights in the research if the taxpayer must pay for the right to use the results of the research.⁴

As a result of the provided research and development services for the Family Trust and bore all costs in connection with such research. To obtain the right to use the results of the research, had to pay substantial royalties to the Family Trust through and During the taxable years ended and paid paid total royalties of approximately and paid total royalties of approximately argues that its research activities are not funded because it pays a below market royalty to However, Treasury Regulation 1.41-5(d)(3) does not require a fair market (or an above fair market) royalty to be considered funded. Thus, we do not believe

¹ Under Section 41(c)(2), however, the minimum base amount is 50 percent of the credit year qualified research expenses.

Treasury Regulation § 1.41-5 is entitled "Qualified Research for Taxable Years Beginning Before January 1, 1986." However, despite this title, Treasury Regulation § 1.41-5 applies equally to post-1986 taxable years. Lockheed Martin Corp. v. United States, 42 Fed. Cl. 485 (1998), rev'd and rem'd on other issue, 210 F.3d 1366 (Fed. Cir. 2000).

⁴ Pursuant to Treasury Regulation 1.41-2(a)(3), if a taxpayer performs research for another person and retains no substantial rights in the research (as defined in Treasury Regulation 1.41-5(d)(2)), the taxpayer cannot claim the Section 41 credit for that research.

's argument has merit.5

During our discussions with the Examination Team, we have expressed concerns about this case unrelated to Section 41. The facts indicate that is incurring substantial uncompensated services for the Family Trust and may be transferring substantial wealth offshore for the benefit of of the family at the Government's expense. The transactions described in this memorandum appear to implicate Federal Gift and Estate tax issues and potential Section 482 issues. We have advised the Examination Team to seek the assistance of local counsel to determine whether other non-Section 41 issues should be perused. Currently, we do not have enough facts to opine on such issues.
